

OYLER CONTESTS ROTH'S ELECTION; HEARING DATE SET

Varied Returns On Tally Sheets In Latimore Township Cited In Petition For Adjustment.

Alleging error in computing and making return of the votes cast in Latimore township for the office of Republican county chairman in last Tuesday's primary election, J. Price Oyler, York street, has instituted action in the court of common pleas for relief.

On the face of the official count, completed by the commissioners late last Friday evening, G. Harry Roth, former prothonotary, was elected to the office of county chairman by a majority of 11 votes.

Through his attorney, Raymond F. Topper, Mr. Oyler filed a petition in the court of common pleas late Monday afternoon. Copies of the petition also were filed with R. E. Deardorff, clerk to the county commissioners, who served as the return board for last Tuesday's primary, and with Mr. Roth.

Judge D. P. McPherson, who is holding court in Pittsburgh this week, was notified by telegram of the institution of Mr. Oyler's action, and in a reply received by Prothonotary C. B. Yohe today he directs that either Associate Judge Miller or Associate Judge Pearson fix Thursday afternoon for a hearing on the appeal.

Hearing Thursday

Associate Judge Miller has set 2 o'clock, Thursday afternoon, as the time for hearing the appeal. He and Associate Judge Pearson will hear and pass upon the appeal, it is said.

After setting forth the apparently divergent returns of the vote cast in Latimore township for Mr. Oyler and Mr. Roth, the petition of Mr. Oyler asks that the ballot box in that district be opened for the purpose of correcting the error "which appears on the face of the return sheets from said township of Latimore, and for relief from the action of the return board of the county of Adams."

Mr. Oyler's petition, in part, follows:

"That your petitioner feels that an injustice has been done him by reason of an error in computing and canvassing the return of the votes cast for the office of Republican county chairman in the voting precinct or district of Latimore township, Adams county, Pennsylvania.

"That in the said district of Latimore township there appears a difference and variation in the number of votes cast as is shown by the primary return sheets as returned by the election board of Latimore township, that in the one return sheet the name of your petitioner appears with a vote of sixty-nine votes for the office of Republican county chairman, while in the other return sheet the name of G. Harry Roth appears with a vote of sixty-nine votes for the said office, and fifty-five for your petitioner."

The present action is the first instance of a contest arising out of last Tuesday's primary, one of the few contested elections ever held in Adams county. Several years ago, a contest arose here over the constitutionality of the so-called absent voters' law in the case of the election of John C. Shearer, sheriff. The contest at that time was brought by G. D. Morrison, Democratic candidate of Straban township.

Joyce Hawley, who allegedly appeared in a tub of wine at Earl Carroll's celebrated party, appeared to testify at the producer's trial for perjury.

MAIL CLERK WEDS IN WILMINGTON

Lester Scott and Miss Margaret Fitz, Charman, Return From Honeymoon.

A "romance of the rails" has culminated in the marriage of Miss Margaret C. Fitz, of Charman, and S. Lester Scott, York street. The couple were united in marriage at Wilmington, Delaware, last Wednesday, by the Rev. J. O. H. Meyer, pastor of St. John's Reformed church. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage. There were no attendants.

As United States mail messenger at the local postoffice, it is Mr. Scott's duty to meet all mail trains on the Western Maryland railroad. Each morning for two school years, Miss Fitz arrived in Gettysburg on the 8:40 train from the west on the Western Maryland railroad.

The couple fell in love with each other, although on most mornings Mr. Scott and Miss Fitz got little more than a glimpse of the other. The kindled spark of love, however, was quickly fanned into flame, and a real "romance of the rails" developed.

After their marriage last week, Mr. and Mrs. Scott took a wedding trip to Trenton and Asbury Park, returning to Gettysburg Sunday evening.

The bride, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Fitz, spent two years at Gettysburg College, but for the past year she taught school at Mont Alto.

Mr. Scott is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Scott, York street. He attended Gettysburg High School, and for a number of years has been connected with the local postoffice as mail messenger. He is prominent in local fraternal circles, being a member of Good Samaritan lodge, 336, Free and Accepted Masons; Knights Templar Commandery, 79; Zembo Shrine Temple, Harrisburg; Gettys Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the Majestic Club.

For the present, Mr. and Mrs. Scott are residing at their respective homes, but they plan to live in Gettysburg as soon as Mr. Scott erects a contemplated dwelling.

In order to distinguish the graves of Civil War veterans from others a small bronze star on a picket is placed on the burial places. These markers also are furnished by the commissioners.

G. Harry Roth, William L. Meals and C. B. Stouffer have been continued as the committee to ascertain the location of the grave of every Civil War veteran in the county. This has not yet been completed, but 75 cemeteries, grave yards and burial grounds have been listed.

The committee has announced that it would appreciate any information that would assist them in their work. Flags and markers may be secured at the office of Mr. Meals, 27 Baltimore street, free of charge.

BABY BEEF CLUB AGAIN HEADS LIST IN STATE CONTEST

72 Boys and Girls Are Now Members Of Standard Organization; Eight Animals Procured.

With the addition of six boys and girls, Adams County's Baby Beef Club again heads the list of similar clubs in Pennsylvania.

This was announced this morning by R. E. Underwood, county farm agent, through whose efforts a baby beef club was organized last year, and repeated for the present year.

The membership of the local club is now 72, leading the Lancaster county club, which has 69 members, but only 36 of them in a standard baby beef club. All of Adams county's boys and girls are in a standard club, so that Adams' club is "head and shoulders" above its nearest rival.

Most of Adams County's Baby Beef Club Herefords were distributed here in April. But four girls and two boys had to be disappointed at that time because there were not enough calves to give every member of the club one.

Secures Eight Steers

On Monday, County Agent Underwood fortunately secured eight additional steers from H. G. Longanecker, of Annville, who had purchased them for his own use in the Kansas City market. The eight additional calves were distributed among the following boys and girls in Adams county:

Nadine R. Garrett, Hanover Route 5; Catherine G. Garrett, Hanover Route 5; Dorothy M. Garrett, Hanover Route 5; Grant Keagy, Hanover Route 5 (3); Ruth Hostetter, Littlestown, and Edwin Lauver, Biglerville.

The 72 members of the Adams County Baby Beef Club are feeding 76 calves this year. They will be fattened for the round-up and sale at the Pennsylvania State Farm Products Show at Harrisburg next January.

TEAMS SET DATES FOR PLANK GAMES

Waynesboro, Hagerstown and Hanover Announce Days at Which Benefit Will be Held.

Additional dates have been set by the teams of the Blue Ridge League for benefit games for the Eddie Plank Memorial Fund, it was announced by the committee in charge of the campaign today. The Hagerstown team has designated Saturday, May 29, as "Eddie Plank Day" at the park in that city. The Hubs play the strong Martinsburg team on that date.

With the postponement of the Waynesboro "Eddie Plank Day," from last Saturday until the morning game of May 31, when the Villagers meet the Chambersburg aggregation, a much larger crowd is expected to be on hand to aid in the cause.

Hanover has also designated Saturday, June 26, as the official day for the collection of funds at their park. The Raiders are scheduled to entertain the Frederick nine on that day.

With the launching of the campaign this week among local supporters a number of bricks have been sold. The desire of those in charge of the campaign is to have as many of the friends of the former star of the American League as possible purchase one brick, at the retail cost of $1 for the Memorial Gymnasium, now under the course of construction at Gettysburg College.

The gist of the replies received up to the present time indicates that the buying of one brick is not the extent to which the admirers of Gettysburg's famed pitcher are willing to go in paying their tribute to his worthy name.

It also would bar federal officials from holding any positions under the states.

Mrs. Deatrack is survived by three daughters and two sons: Misses Margaret S. and J. Anna Deatrack, both at home; D. Grant and Charles H. Deatrack, both of New Oxford Route 4, and Mrs. J. M. Lough, Charleston, Missouri. Five grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. Isaac Haverstock, Arendtsville, also survive.

BABY BEEF CLUB AGAIN HEADS LIST IN STATE CONTEST

72 Boys and Girls Are Now Members Of Standard Organization; Eight Animals Procured.

With the addition of six boys and girls, Adams County's Baby Beef Club again heads the list of similar clubs in Pennsylvania.

This was announced this morning by R. E. Underwood, county farm agent, through whose efforts a baby beef club was organized last year, and repeated for the present year.

The membership of the local club is now 72, leading the Lancaster county club, which has 69 members, but only 36 of them in a standard baby beef club. All of Adams county's boys and girls are in a standard club, so that Adams' club is "head and shoulders" above its nearest rival.

Most of Adams County's Baby Beef Club Herefords were distributed here in April. But four girls and two boys had to be disappointed at that time because there were not enough calves to give every member of the club one.

Secures Eight Steers
On Monday, County Agent Underwood fortunately secured eight additional steers from H. G. Longanacker, of Annville, who had purchased them for his own use in the Kansas City market. The eight additional calves were distributed among the following boys and girls in Adams county:

Nadine R. Garrett, Hanover Route 5; Catherine G. Garrett, Hanover Route 5; Dorothy M. Garrett, Hanover Route 5; Grant Keagy, Hanover Route 5 (3); Ruth Hostetter, Littlestown, and Edwin Lauver, Biglerville.

The 72 members of the Adams County Baby Beef Club are feeding 76 calves this year. They will be fattened for the round-up and sale at the Pennsylvania State Farm Products Show at Harrisburg next January.

TEAMS SET DATES FOR PLANK GAMES

Waynesboro, Hagerstown and Hanover Announce Days at Which Benefit Will be Held.

Additional dates have been set by the teams of the Blue Ridge League for benefit games for the Eddie Plank Memorial Fund, it was announced by the committee in charge of the campaign today. The Hagerstown team has designated Saturday, May 29, as "Eddie Plank Day" at the park in that city. The Hubs play the strong Martinsburg team on that date.

With the postponement of the Waynesboro "Eddie Plank Day," from last Saturday until the morning game of May 31, when the Villagers meet the Chambersburg aggregation, a much larger crowd is expected to be on hand to aid in the cause.

Hanover has also designated Saturday, June 26, as the official day for the collection of funds at their park. The Raiders are scheduled to entertain the Frederick nine on that day.

With the launching of the campaign this week among local supporters a number of bricks have been sold. The desire of those in charge of the campaign is to have as many of the friends of the former star of the American League as possible purchase one brick, at the retail cost of $1 for the Memorial Gymnasium, now under the course of construction at Gettysburg College.

The gist of the replies received up to the present time indicates that the buying of one brick is not the extent to which the admirers of Gettysburg's famed pitcher are willing to go in paying their tribute to his worthy name.

PRESIDENT READY TO MODIFY EDICT ON ENFORCEMENT

Denies Order Does Not Evade State Sovereignty, But Is An Aid In Rum Fight.

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, May 25.—Coincident with a new outburst in Congress against the presidential order authorizing federal employment of state officers in prohibition enforcement the White House today said the president was ready to modify the proposal if it proved oppressive.

The White House maintained however that the president saw no cause for alarm in the order and was certain it did not constitute an evasion of state sovereignty, but was rather an aid to the states.

At the same time the president's views were being set forth, Representative Dill, Republican, of Maryland, a leader of the House wets, introduced a resolution to prohibit state officers from simultaneously holding of any federal positions. It also would bar federal officials from holding any positions under the states.

LOCAL TEMPLARS MARCH AT YORK

Fifty Members of Gettysburg Commandery Parade With State Organization.

Fifty members of the Gettysburg Commandery, Number 79, Knights Templar, led by the boys' band of the Scotland Orphan School, marched in the Knights Templar parade at York this morning.

More than 5000 Templars from all sections of the state with thirty-seven bands composed the parade which, after passing over a number of the streets, ended at the Fair Grounds where the reviewing stand had been erected. Besides the members of the order who participated in the parade, thousands of spectators from distant towns lined the streets.

Thomas Shipley, Right Eminent Grand Commander of the state, headed the parade, accompanied by the grand commandery and past commanders.

After the parade a sightseeing trip was scheduled for the visitors from other sections of the state and many automobile parties came to this town to view the battlefield. An invitation to the Templars to visit the battlefield was despatched by the Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary and Lions Club and the Gettysburg Hotelmen's association.

20 TON LITTERS
NOW IN COUNTY

Entries For State Contest Will Close May 30; Adams and York Are Tied.

State College, Pa., May 25.—Key-stone hog growers will have the remainder of this week to nominate their best porker families for the 1926 Keystone Ton Litter Club, H. H. Havner, head of animal husbandry extension at the Pennsylvania State College, said today. The last day for nominations is May 30.

York county, which lead the nation last year with 28 ton litters, to date has reported 20 litters in the attempt to grow a ton of pork in 180 days this year. Adams county also has 20 litters reported. Preliminary reports received at the animal husbandry extension office here give Jefferson county credit for 15 enrollments; Dauphin and Cumberland counties, 14 each, and Westmoreland, 13.

Havner urges those entered in the club this year to remember the five points of economical pork production in past years demonstrated. They are the necessity of having good breeding stock; prolific sows are good mothers; proper sanitary conditions, such as are provided with the McLean system of sanitation, to help raise a large per cent of the pigs farrowed; proper pasture system to furnish sanitary environment during the life of the pig and reduce feed cost; and proper balanced rations in large quantities to produce rapid and economical gains.

LEGALITY OF COAL
TAX QUESTIONED

Harrisburg, May 25.—Constitutionality of the anthracite coal tax is involved in the case of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania against the Hudson Coal Company listed for argument before the State Supreme Court at its session beginning here Monday. The case was carried up on an appeal by the company from a decision of the Dauphin county courts, which required payment to the state of $43,350 taxes.

It is the company's contention that the tax violates sections of both the federal and state constitutions, that bituminous and anthracite are interchangeable, the same chemical elements entering into both but in different proportions and that coal is not divided into two classes but separate groups.

The tax is imposed on all coal prepared for market at the rate of one and one-half per cent of its value. The act levying the tax was passed by the 1921 legislature.

In addition to the Hudson Coal Company case the court has more than a score of others on its calendar for argument.

BALLOT BOXES IMPOUNDED

(By Associated Press.)
Scranton, May 25.—County commissioners have ordered every ballot box in the 23 districts in the county impounded. The order was issued after both Fisher and Beidleman forces had alleged fraud in 23 districts. The disclosures in some of these districts prompted the commissioners to order in all boxes.

Horse Thief Detectors on The Verge of Disbanding

One of the oldest organizations of the Hanover section and one which the members themselves believe has outlived its purpose and usefulness met in Hanover in annual session last week. About sixty of the ninety members still adhering to the ancient and honorable Society for the Detection of Horse Thieves gathered to reorganize and to meditate on the remarkable change of the times in the past decade.

Founded in 1858 the Society for the Detection of Horse Thieves has had to pay in its sixty-eight years of existence for but one stolen animal although in its prime its membership ran into the hundreds and the horses it was supposed to protect into the thousands. This figure speaks wonders either for the efficiency of the body to detect thieves or to the freedom of this part of the country from that gentry.

It was formerly necessary for all animals of members to be branded, the brand being HA, the initial letters of Hanover. Later this practice was abandoned. The entrance fee of $2 paid by all members is the only source of income outside of a 25 cents fine assessed if the member absented himself from the annual meeting.

It is said about $1,000 or $1,100 remains in the treasury and that this sum is the chief reason for the members sticking to the society, not sentiment. About a dozen members drop out or die each year and the survivors scent a division of the funds when the break-up which cannot be long delayed takes place. Fathers who fear the cannot hang on long urge their sons to join in order that the "inheritance may not go out of the family."

It was proposed at the meeting that the body turn itself into a society for the detection of auto thieves, but older members shook their heads and asserted that the thousand odd dollars would last just about two weeks when it comes to motor cars. The horse thief detecting business is dead, they realize, and the only thing left to do is to hold the obsequies.

Martin Wildasin was again chosen head of the organization. The other officers reelected are: Harry B. Slagle, vice president; William F. Dumas secretary; C. R. Garrett, treasurer; Edward Houck, Theodore Utz and H. M. Grote, auditors.

FARMERS TO HEAR ABOUT LIGHTNING

Demonstration in Protective Means Will be Given at State College Field Day.

State College, Pa., May 25.—Fire and lightning will play an important part in the Farmers' Field Day at the Pennsylvania State College here, June 18, it was announced today.

J. R. Haswell, extension agricultural engineer of the Pennsylvania State College, will stage a lightning rod demonstration, explaining the function, installation, and maintenance of lightning rods as protection against nature's greatest incendiary agent.

E. G. Lantz, member of the college farm machinery department, will explain spontaneous combustion. He made a survey of mysterious fires in southeastern Pennsylvania last summer and fall in which he found spontaneous combustion a prominent cause of blazes. He will cite these cases and offer methods of prevention.

Farm fires cost the people of Pennsylvania $3,294,000 annually, Lantz declares, this state leading the whole country. Lightning is the chief cause and spontaneous combustion ranks not far behind.

SESQUI TO OPEN ON NEXT MONDAY

Philadelphia, May 25.—The opening of the Sesquicentennial International Exposition, which will commemorate a century and a half of American independence, is not one week off. Each day adds to the holiday atmosphere in which this dignified old city is putting on a "party dress" for Uncle Sam's 150th birthday celebration. Flags, streamers and bunting are blossoming out each morning, and for a week Philadelphia's city hall has glowed nightly in daring reds and blues a cloak of color the huge structure will don throughout the exposition.

Next Monday, the opening day of the exposition, the city will be the scene of a patriotic demonstration. Beginning with a parade from City Hall, in the center of the commercial district, down Broad street to League Island Park, where the exposition has reared its many structures almost magically within the last year, the fair will be declared formally opened by Mayor W. Free-land Kendrick and other officials. Thereafter, the exposition managers believe Philadelphia will be the mecca to several millions of visitors and sightseers before the gates close next November.

GRANGES TO AID
NEW DORMITORY

County Organizations Will Raise Funds For Building at State College This Summer.

State College, Pa., May 25.—Granges all over the state will hold festivals and other functions during June to raise money for the Grange Memorial Dormitory for girls at the Pennsylvania State College, R. G. Bressler, member of the Grange Memorial committee, said today.

"When completed, the memorial will cost $250,000.

Grange leaders in Pennsylvania have placed their stamp of approval upon the project, and many subordinate granges have already met their quota. Messages from other states indicate a wholesome interest among neighboring granges in the unique project.

Harry A. Caton, master of the Ohio State Grange, says: "The history of the grange in its early days is so closely connected with the real establishment of our agricultural colleges that it would seem fitting that in the sixtieth year of the grange as a national organization one of its state branches should undertake a campaign like this.

"I trust that this campaign will go over in full; a building of this kind on the campus at State College will be a real monument to the grange, the greatest of rural community organizations."

GAS BY-PRODUCT AID TO FARMERS

Shortage of Nitrogen Is 3,440,000 Tons Annually; Ammonium Sulphate May Aid.

It is estimated that the United States requires 9,000,000 tons of nitrogen per year. Only 5,450,000 tons are available from all sources, however, leaving an annual nitrogen deficiency of about 3,550,000 tons, remarks the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee.

The conservation of soil fertility may be partially solved by the manufacture of gas industry, which has a fixed nitrogen by-product available in the form of ammonium sulphate. Here is a vast potential source of fertilization that may be applied directly to the problem of conservation that is considered one of the gravest factors in the agricultural field.

According to a report of the National Industrial Conference Board the replacement of mineral wealth in the soil has been neglected to so great an extent that in many cases farming today is not really a cultivation of the soil, but rather the extraction of its minerals. Replacement of the minerals that enter into vegetable growth is vital to farm production.

JOYCE ON STAND AGAINST CARROLL

Show Girl Testifies She Was Drunk During "Bath Tub Party."

(By Associated Press.)

New York, May 25.—Joyce Hawley testified today in the perjury trial of Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, that she not only occupied a bathtub on the stage of the Earl Carroll theatre, but that she was drunk when she got into it from liquor served her in the theatre. She also testified that she had been offered $350 by an associate of Carroll if she would appear before the grand jury and say there was no champagne or wine served at the party.

The trial was delayed today when Miss Hawley, who was scheduled to be the first witness, failed to appear. United States District Attorney Buckner put Irving S. Cobb, writer, and guest at the bathtub party, on the stand, and then requested a recess because of Miss Hawley's absence. He went into conference with Judge Goodard and intimated that he might ask a warrant for the show girl.

She rolled into court an hour and a half late offering the explanation that she had read a newspaper that she was to be the fourth witness of the day and not the first. The trial was immediately resumed with Miss Hawley on the stand.

20 TON LITTERS NOW IN COUNTY

Entries For State Contest Will Close May 30; Adams and York Are Tied.

State College, Pa., May 25.—Key-stone hog growers will have the remainder of this week to nominate their best porker families for the 1926 Keystone Ton Litter Club, H. H. Havner, head of animal husbandry extension at the Pennsylvania State College, said today. The last day for nominations is May 30.

York county, which led the nation last year with 28 ton litters, to date has reported 20 litters in the attempt to grow a ton of pork in 180 days this year. Adams county also has 20 litters reported. Preliminary reports received at the animal husbandry extension office here give Jefferson county credit for 15 enrollments; Dauphin and Cumberland counties, 14 each, and Westmoreland, 13.

Havner urges those entered in the club this year to remember the five points of economical pork production in past years demonstrated. They are the necessity of having good breeding stock; prolific sows are good mothers; proper sanitary conditions, such as are provided with the McLean system of sanitation, to help raise a large per cent of the pigs farrowed; proper pasture system to furnish sanitary environment during the life of the pig and reduce feed cost; and proper balanced rations in large quantities to produce rapid and economical gains.

LEGALITY OF COAL TAX QUESTIONED

Harrisburg, May 25.—Constitutionality of the anthracite coal tax is involved in the case of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania against the Hudson Coal Company listed for argument before the State Supreme Court at its session beginning here Monday. The case was carried up on an appeal by the company from a decision of the Dauphin county courts, which required payment to the state of $43,350 taxes.

It is the company's contention that the tax violates sections of both the federal and state constitutions, that bituminous and anthracite are interchangeable, the same chemical elements entering into both but in different proportions and that coal is not divided into two classes but separate groups.

The tax is imposed on all coal prepared for market at the rate of one and one-half per cent of its value. The act levying the tax was passed by the 1921 legislature.

In addition to the Hudson Coal Company case the court has more than a score of others on its calendar for argument.

BALLOT BOXES IMPOUNDED

(By Associated Press.)

Scranton, May 25.—County commissioners have ordered every ballot box in the 23 districts in the county impounded. The order was issued after both Fisher and Beidleman forces had alleged fraud in 23 districts. The disclosures in some of these districts prompted the commissioners to order in all boxes.

Horse Thief Detectors on The Verge of Disbanding

One of the oldest organizations of the Hanover section and one which the members themselves believe has outlived its purpose and usefulness met in Hanover in annual session last week. About sixty of the ninety members still adhering to the ancient and honorable Society for the Detection of Horse Thieves gathered to reorganize and to meditate on the remarkable change of the times in the past decade.

Founded in 1858 the Society for the Detection of Horse Thieves has had to pay in its sixty-eight years of existence for but one stolen animal although in its prime its membership ran into the hundreds and the horses it was supposed to protect into the thousands. This figure speaks wonders either for the efficiency of the body to detect thieves or to the freedom of this part of the country from that gentry.

It was formerly necessary for all animals of members to be branded, the brand being HA, the initial letters of Hanover. Later this practice was abandoned. The entrance fee of $2 paid by all members is the only source of income outside of a 25 cents fine assessed if the member absented himself from the annual meeting.

It is said about $1,000 or $1,100 remains in the treasury and that this sum is the chief reason for the members sticking to the society, not sentiment. About a dozen members drop out or die each year and the survivors scent a division of the funds when the break-up which cannot be long delayed takes place. Fathers who fear the cannot hang on long urge their sons to join in order that the "inheritance" may not go out of the family.

It was proposed at the meeting that the body turn itself into a society for the detection of auto thieves, but older members shook their heads and asserted that the thousand odd dollars would last just about two weeks when it comes to motor cars. The horse thief detecting business is dead, they realize, and the only thing left to do is to hold the obsequies.

Martin Wildasin was again chosen head of the organization. The other officers reelected are: Harry B. Slagle, vice president; William F. Dumas secretary; C. R. Garrett, treasurer; Edward Houck, Theodore Utz and H. M. Grote, auditors.

BRENNAN TO RUN ON WET PLANK

Chicago, May 25.—George P. Brennan, Democratic national committee-man, has sponsored a move to give voters of Illinois an opportunity to express themselves on the prohibition question in the November election, at the same time that he runs for senator on a "ringing wet" platform.

Petitions to place a prohibition proposal similar to the one to be voted on in New York state under the provisions of the state public policy act will be circulated immediately, Mr. Brennan said.

FARMERS TO HEAR ABOUT LIGHTNING

Demonstration in Protective Means Will be Given at State College Field Day.

State College, Pa., May 25.—Fire and lightning will play an important part in the Farmers' Field Day at the Pennsylvania State College here, June 18, it was announced today.

J. R. Haswell, extension agricultural engineer of the Pennsylvania State College, will stage a lightning rod demonstration, explaining the function, installation, and maintenance of lightning rods as protection against nature's greatest incendiary agent.

E. G. Lantz, member of the college farm machinery department, will explain spontaneous combustion. He made a survey of mysterious fires in southeastern Pennsylvania last summer and fall in which he found spontaneous combustion a prominent cause of blazes. He will cite these cases and offer methods of prevention.

Farm fires cost the people of Pennsylvania $3,294,000 annually, Lantz declares, this state leading the whole country. Lightning is the chief cause and spontaneous combustion ranks not far behind.

SESQUI TO OPEN ON NEXT MONDAY

Philadelphia, May 25.—The opening of the Sesquicentennial International Exposition, which will commemorate a century and a half of American independence, is not one week off. Each day adds to the holiday atmosphere in which this dignified old city is putting on a "party dress" for Uncle Sam's 150th birthday celebration. Flags, streamers and bunting are blossoming out each morning and for a week Philadelphia's city hall has glowed nightly in daring reds and blues a cloak of color the huge structure will don throughout the exposition.

Next Monday, the opening day of the exposition, the city will be the scene of a patriotic demonstration. Beginning with a parade from City Hall, in the center of the commercial district, down Broad street to League Island Park, where the exposition has reared its many structures almost magically within the last year, the fair will be declared formally opened by Mayor W. Free-land Kendrick and other officials: Thereafter, the exposition managers believe Philadelphia will be the mecca to several millions of visitors and sightseers before the gates close next November.

GRANGES TO AID NEW DORMITORY

County Organizations Will Raise Funds For Building at State College This Summer.

State College, Pa., May 25.—Granges all over the state will hold festivals and other functions during June to raise money for the Grange Memorial Dormitory for girls at the Pennsylvania State College, R. G. Bressler, member of the Grange Memorial committee, said today.

"When completed, the memorial will cost $250,000. Grange leaders in Pennsylvania have placed their stamp of approval upon the project, and many subordinate granges have already met their quota. Messages from other states indicate a wholesome interest among neighboring granges in the unique project.

Harry A. Caton, master of the Ohio State Grange, says: "The history of the grange in its early days is so closely connected with the real establishment of our agricultural colleges that it would seem fitting that in the sixtieth year of the grange as a national organization one of its state branches should undertake a campaign like this.

"I trust that this campaign will go over in full; a building of this kind on the campus at State College will be a real monument to the grange, the greatest of rural community organizations."

"Barbara Brown," he plunged. "I'm the sort of yokel who has flattered himself, in the past, that he knew quite a bit about women. But I've never been able to dope 'em out."

"Nor I," she said. "It's very decent of you to take the attitude you're taking," he said. "You're kind enough to say I was once gallant. If ever I can be gallant for you again—if I can steal anything for you."

"Thank you," she said. "Tell me, aren't you a member of the Bohemians?"

He colored. "Yes." Before she could continue he went on: "You've heard, then, about that trouble. I want you to know the facts. They were discussing you. Walden and a chap named Kohler, who's a member we didn't see much of. This fellow Kohler was asking Walden how J. B. came to name your baby in his will. I happened to hear in Homet, I defended you."

"How?" demanded Barbara. "I said I knew you weren't that sort," stoutly maintained Petrie. "What sort?" persisted Barbara. "The sort," floundered Petrie—"the sort—well, you know—the promiscuous sort."

"You told them—Mr. Walden and this What'sname, Kohler—that you knew I was not the promiscuous sort. Well, now, how did you convey that?"

Petrie looked immeasurably confounded. Barbara suddenly had an inkling of the meaning of the scene at the club.

"Thanks," said Barbara bitterly. It dawned on her that her visitor was a pluperfect cad.

"You told them that you had tried for me yourself?" Petrie nodded.

"And the fact that you failed was absolute proof that I was not promiscuous?" Barbara laughed shrilly.

"And then he hit me," completed Petrie dully, "with a pile driver fist."

"I'm not interested," said Barbara acidly. "In this Mr. Battling Kohler. Let us return to the subject of your visit."

Petrie became alert. "You said you'd steal for me," said Barbara. "I want you to steal."

"Ask me." Ask me? encouraged Petrie. "And don't be afraid to call a spade a spade."

"I'll call a club a club," she said. "I'm talking about the Bohemians. It's the club custom, I believe, to hold a sort of jamboree each year, and to accept en masse an invitation from some person."

Petrie frankly completed the thought: "Who foots the bill? Yes. But we call it a revel."

"Better yet. Well, I'm taking over the Lindsay place on Sand's Point and I want to have a bit of a house warming. And right now, on account of—you know—I mean there's not a half dozen people I could invite. And I want a crowd. I thought I'd offer the place to the Bohemians. I couldn't suggest it and risk a flat refusal. But if you—"

"You want me to fix it for you? I'll be delighted. I know they'll be tickled to accept. You've got a great idea. Some of the boys are fine fellows—the sort you ought to know. We're not all Kohlers in the club. I get you. You want to know the right sort. Great! Barbara, there are some Bluebookers in the club. It'll be a short cut right into the top crust and without going in by way of the women. It's a peach of an idea and I'll fix the whole thing."

"Thanks," said Barbara bitterly. It dawned on her that her visitor was a pluperfect cad. A magnificent consistency was in him. He was congenitally a rotter—but she needed him.

"I'll take it up this evening," he babbled on. "What sort of party ought we to figure on? The boys are pretty wild. How about a lawn fete? In costume?"

"I'll leave the details to you," said Barbara. "And remember—I want them all to come—all of them."

Petrie, on the brink of departure, had a sudden doubt. "This fellow Kohler, now," he said, "what about him? However, the club can't accept the invitation en masse and exclude him. But you can tame him, I guess, can't you?"

"Bring him too," said Barbara purring. Her eyes narrowed like a cat's.

By the street of "By and By" one arrives at the house of "never."

"We Boys"

The Bohemians' annual revel was turned over to a committee of "We Boys." To the gentlemen of this group, rebuffed as they were by the finance committee on all suggestions involving a foray on the purely theoretical budget surplus, the invitation extended by Miss Barbara Brown to a housewarming of one of the best Long Island estates came as manna from heaven.

Gus Petrie's proposal of the invitation found much favor in their eyes. None the less they hesitated to have it out with their very unbohemian consciences whether or not they could accept so great a favor from a lady so much discussed.

Ahem! That fortune, now, Old Hardiman didn't exactly give it to her for nothing. Now, did he?

The conscientious committee-man who thus voiced what they were all thinking was listened to, but disliked. The grateful smiles of the gentlemen who met later on Petrie's suggestion were reserved for another, who humorously phrased the more convenient point of view.

"If we're gentlemen and Bohemians," he said, "we can't let a refusal offend the lady." He paused and added anxiously: "Do you think, Petrie, she'll properly gauge our thirst?"

"I'm ordering the champagne myself," Petrie spoke the magic words into ears already cordial.

It was further moved and seconded that no wives should be invited. So few wives, you know, being real Bohemians, not even the ones who wear silk hair-bands instead of hats.

Besides, it was nice to be able to get away from the frau once in a while and to take in a stag party. Not exactly stag, at that, but—you know.

Acceptance was unanimous. Somebody suggested a lawn masquerade.

The chat thereupon became less clubbish, more barish.

Barbara's ears would have tingled were their owner within hearing distance. Mr. Petrie's comments were particularly illuminating.

A good week in advance of the event, a bulletin appeared on the club blackboard behind the taxi phone.

Petrie plunged into conspiratorial conferences with bootleggers, decorators and caterers, meetings which filled all his waking hours with ecstasy. Barbara had given him to understand that she'd foot all the bills, and Petrie managed to get his commission on all the deals he made.

The club bulletin gave rise, in various knots of gossiping members, to a great deal of genteel joking. The tongues of the gossipers were particularly loosened by the footnote to the bulletin, which pointed out that no married member was to escort his own wife.

Members who kept up to date their little note books full of telephone numbers were much in demand. One of these—the admirable Mr. Petrie himself—it was said he had provided ten members, whose collection of phone numbers antedated matrimony and were therefore quite useless, with lady partners who were anything but wives.

"Oh! Gloomy Gus won't have to worry," was the consensus. "While we're rustling his second-hand wench he's got the winner all tagged for himself. Lucky dog! They say this Barbara Brown's as long on looks as she is on the mazzuma."

To their great surprise Petrie took the jests striking his name with that of their hostess uneasily and with ill grace.

"Lay off," he begged. "Don't spill that line."

It was noted and commented upon that he showed particular alarm once at the bar when Miss Brown's name was mentioned while Bravo Kohler was having a lonesome drink. It was known that Kohler was on an ugly bat, and that all the alcohol with which he was drenching a fretful stomach was turning there into a great hankering for trouble.

Paul Layton, the club's mal-a-prop, was the luckless wight who spoke Barbara's name on this occasion. He meant no harm by it. He was the mildest man in the club, and only by the most elastic interpretation of the by-laws a Bohemian at all.

But he had taken two drinks, and he brought down on his foolish head all the wrath which had gathered in the heart of Bravo since the day on which, returning from his abortive excursion to the home of Barbara in Ryeneck, to start instantly for the Antipodes, he had stumbled promptly to the club bar instead.

At the sound of Barbara's name Bravo stood up. Layton, twirling his cane, backed up before the menace which blazed in Bravo's bloodshot eyes.

"Put down your cane and put up your fists," said Bravo.

"My dear chap," began the astounded Layton.

Bravo yanked the cane from his hands and sent it whirling to a corner of the room.

"What's it all about?" quavered Layton.

"You mentioned the name of Barbara Brown, didn't you?" roared Bravo.

"Surely."

"Do you know her?"

"Why—or—no. But I rather hope so."

"I can't hit you," said Bravo. "If I ever hear you mention Miss Brown's name again I'll kill you."

Mr. Mechling was a native of Mount Pleasant. He was a member of Company B of the old 10th Regiment and played in the organization's drum corps. Later he enlisted in the regular army and served in a number of the campaigns against the Indians, being with General Custer's forces at Little Big Horn.

DIVER DIES WHEN AIR LINE FOULS

Foot Became Entangled When Tube Is Disconnected; Efforts to Revive Fail.

New York, May 25.—His lead-soled boot jammed tightly in the narrow steel lattice of a cofferdam's frame, his air line twisted and tangled, John Devine died a diver's death thirty feet under the East river yesterday afternoon.

He fought frantically until the air grew noxious in his heavy steel helmet. The last bubbles broke on the surface while Alex Hanson, his diving mate, hustled into his suit. When Hansen reached him, his body was still held erect by the pressure of the water.

Hansen, careless of his own fate, freed his friend, the laborers on the scow above pulled him up and two resuscitation crews tried to revive him. Their efforts were futile.

Leaves Five Children
Five children were left fatherless by Devine's death.

The job Devine was working on is in two horizontal tunnels at the foot of Fourteenth street. Shortly before 1 o'clock the four men working on the scow hauled Hansen to the surface. A moment later Devine was seen clinging to the bottom rung of the diver's ladder over the scow's edge.

As far as the police could learn, one of the crew manning the pump disconnected Devin's air hose momentarily, and the diver, affected by the sudden cessation of air, fell or slipped from the ladder. His disappearance was not noticed for a few seconds. Then the pump man hastily connected the line and pumped furiously.

Air Line Is Fouled

Devine probably revived somewhat but found he had fallen on top of the latticed framework covering the cofferdam. His heavy boot became caught in an angle of steel and, still probably half conscious, he could not free himself.

Somehow his air line became foul-

ed. His struggles ceased and the stream of bubbles, which shows the surface crew that all is well with the diver below, terminated.

REMEMBER, how it used to be when you could hardly wait for mealtime? And then, sit down and eat several helpings of everything—enjoy every morsel and get up from the table feeling satisfied with the World, happy with everybody and ready for anything?

But what a difference in living when even the slightest smell of food sickens you! Never hungry—no matter how tempting the food is—nothing tasting right. And then, after nibbling at a few bites, feeling worse than ever.

Oh, life is hardly worth living this way. And yet, all in the World the matter with you is that you are starving for rich, red blood. And it is acknowledged everywhere that S. S. S. helps Nature build these healthy red-blood-cells by the millions!

All you need to do to get back that wonderful appetite is to build rich, red-blood-cells with S. S. S. It's simple. Just try it, like thousands are doing every day.

See for yourself what S. S. S. will do. S. S. S. means blood with a punch—brimful of new life and energy. Get your S. S. S. at any good druggist. The larger size is more economical.

Miss Nobody

Published by arrangement with First National Pictures Inc.

"Barbara Brown," he plunged. "I'm the sort of yokel who has flattered himself, in the past, that he knew quite a bit about women. But I've never been able to dope you out."

"Nor I," she said. "It's very decent of you to take the attitude you're taking," he said. "You're kind enough to say I was once gallant. If ever I can be gallant for you again—if I can steal anything for you—"

"Thank you," she said. "Tell me, aren't you a member of the Bohemians?"

He colored. "Yes." Before she could continue he went on: "You've heard, then, about that trouble. I want you to know the facts. They were discussing you. Walden and a chap named Kohler, who's a member we didn't see much of. This fellow Kohler was asking Walden how J. B. came to name your baby in his will. I happened to horn in. Honest, I defended you."

"How?" demanded Barbara. "I said I knew you weren't that sort," stoutly maintained Petrie. "What sort?" persisted Barbara. "The sort," floundered Petrie. "The sort—well, you know—the promiscuous sort."

"You told them—Mr. Walden and this Whatshisname, Kohler—that you knew I was not the promiscuous sort. Well, now, how did you convey that?"

Petrie looked immeasurably confounded. Barbara suddenly had an inkling of the meaning of the scene at the club.

"Thanks," said Barbara bitterly. It dawned on her that her visitor was a pluperfect cad.

"You told them that you had tried for me yourself?" Petrie nodded.

"And the fact that you failed was absolute proof that I was not promiscuous?" Barbara laughed shrilly.

"And then he hit me," completed Petrie dully, "—with a pile driver fist."

"I'm not interested," said Barbara acidly. "In this Mr. Battling Kohler. Let us return to the subject of your visit."

Petrie became alert. "You said you'd steal for me," said Barbara. "I want you to steal."

"Ask me! Ask me!" encouraged Petrie. "And don't be afraid to call a spade a spade."

"I'll call a club a club," she said. "I'm talking about the Bohemians. It's the club custom, I believe, to hold a sort of rambol each year, and to accept en masse an invitation from some person—"

Petrie frankly completed the thought: "Who foots the bill? Yes. But we call it a revel."

"Better yet. Well, I'm taking over the Lindsay place on Sand's Point and I want to have a bit of a house warming. And right now, on account of—you know—I mean there's not a half dozen people I could invite. And I want a crowd. I thought I'd offer the place to the Bohemians. I couldn't suggest it and risk a flat refusal. But if you—"

"You want me to fix it for you?" I'll be delighted. I know they'll be tickled to accept. You've got a great idea. Some of the boys are fine fellows—the sort you ought to know. We're not all Kohlers in the club. I get you. You want to know the right sort. Great! Barbara, there are some Bluebookers in the club. I'll be a short cut right into the top crust and without going in by way of the women. It's a peach of an idea and I'll fix the whole thing."

"Thanks," said Barbara bitterly. It dawned on her that her visitor was the pluperfect cad. A magnificent consistency was in him. He was congenitally a rotter—but she needed him.

"I'll take it up this evening," he babbled on. "What sort of party ought we to figure on? The boys are pretty wild. How about a lawn fete? In costume?"

"I'll leave the details to you," said Barbara. "And remember—I want them all to come—all of them."

Petrie, on the brink of departure, had a sudden doubt. "This fellow Kohler, now," he said, "what about him? However, the club can't accept the invitation en masse and exclude him. But you can name him, I guess, can't you?"

"Bring him too," said Barbara purringly. Her eyes narrowed like a cat's.

"By the street of 'By and By' one arrives at the house of 'never.'"

Hero Of Massacre Dies In Washington

Greensburg, Pa., May 25.—Henry Meehling, who died in Washington and who was believed to have been one of the last survivors of the Little Big Horn massacre by Sioux Indians in 1876, was a former resident of Mount Pleasant, near here. He had been an inmate in the soldiers' home in Washington.

Mr. Meehling was a native of Mount Pleasant. He was a member of Company B of the old 10th Regiment and played in the organization's drum corps. Later he enlisted in the regular army and served in a number of the campaigns against the Indians, being with General Custer's forces at Little Big Horn.

DIVER DIES WHEN

AIR LINE FOULS

Foot Became Entangled When Tube Is Disconnected; Efforts to Revive Fail.

New York, May 25.—His lead-soled boot jammed tightly in the narrow steel lattice of a cofferdam's frame, his air line twisted and tangled, John Devine died a diver's death thirty feet under the East river yesterday afternoon.

He fought frantically until the air grew noxious in his heavy steel helmet. The last bubbles broke on the surface while Alex Hanson, his diving mate, hustled into his suit. When Hansen reached him, his body was still held erect by the pressure of the water.

Hansen, careless of his own fate, freed his friend, the laborer on the scow above pulled him up and two resuscitation crews tried to revive him. Their efforts were futile.

Leaves Five Children
Five children were left fatherless by Devine's death.

The job Devine was working on is in two horizontal tunnels at the foot of Fourteenth street. Shortly before 1 o'clock the four men working on the scow hauled Hansen to the surface. A moment later Devine was seen clinging to the bottom rung of the diver's ladder over the scow's edge.

As far as the police could learn, one of the crew manning the pump disconnected Devine's air hose momentarily, and the diver, affected by the sudden cessation of air, fell or slipped from the ladder. His disappearance was not noticed for a few seconds. Then the pump man hastily connected the line and pumped furiously.

Air Line Is Fouled

Devine probably revived somewhat but found he had fallen on top of the latticed framework covering the cofferdam. His heavy boot became caught in an angle of steel and, still probably half conscious, he could not free himself.

Somehow his air line became foul-

ed. His struggles ceased and the stream of bubbles, which shows the surface crew that all is well with the diver below, terminated.

Is your appetite gone?

REMEMBER, how it used to be when you could hardly wait for mealtime? And then, sit down and eat several helpings of everything—enjoy every morsel and get up from the table feeling satisfied with the World, happy with everybody and ready for anything?

But what a difference in living when even the sight and smell of food sickens you! Near hungry—no matter how tempting the food is—nothing tasting right. And then, after nibbling at a few bites, feeling worse than ever.

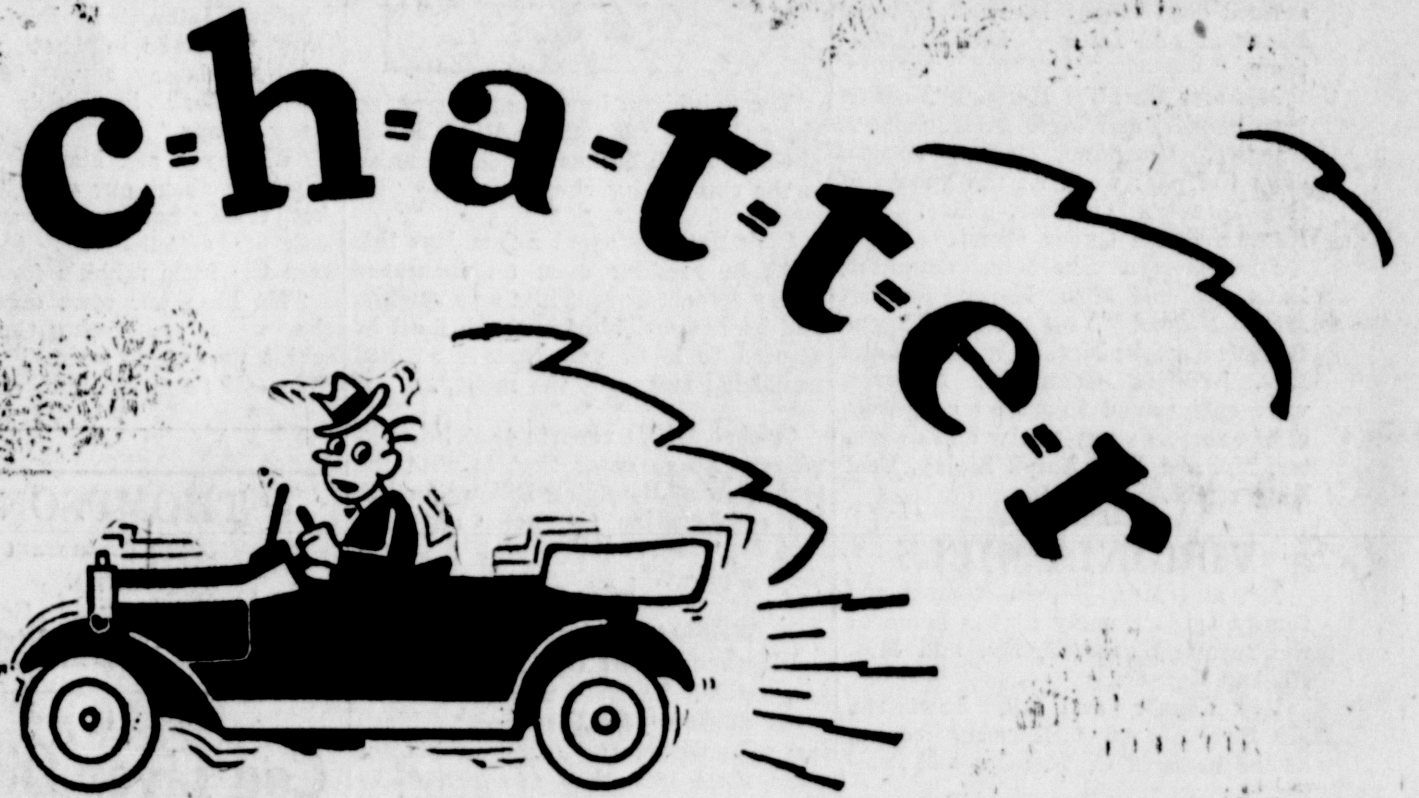

Oh, life is hardly worth living this way. And yet, all in the World the matter with you is that you are starving for rich, red blood. And it is acknowledged everywhere that S. S. S. helps Nature build these healthy red-blood-cells by the millions!

All you need to do to get back that wonderful appetite is to build rich, red-blood-cells with S. S. S. It's simple. Just try it, like thousands are doing every day.

See for yourself what S. S. S. will do. S. S. S. means blood with a punch—brimful of new life and energy. Get your S. S. S. at any good druggist.

The larger size is more economical.

Kill that for good

IT IS so unnecessary—that nerve-racking, power-wasting, car-wrecking chatter-chatter-chatter.

Lose it for good and all. Simply drain your crankcase. Refill with Atlantic N. C. . . . and out goes the chatter, almost instantly.

Keep on using Atlantic N. C. and it won't return. You can start, stop or change speeds smoothly, silently. Your car obeys like a well-trained soldier.

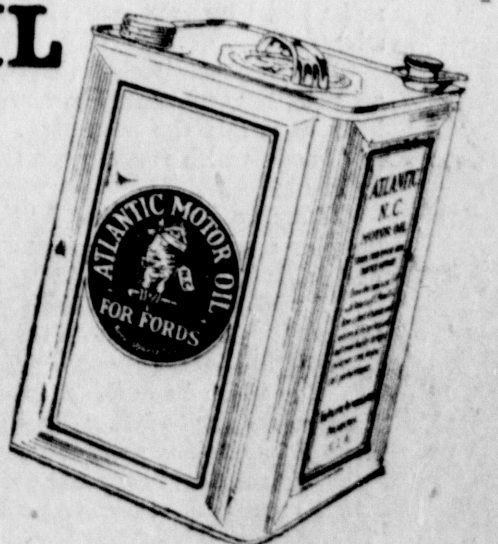

Thousands upon thousands of users will tell you that Atlantic N. C. is the most remarkable special oil ever made for Ford cars. It not only kills chatter, but makes transmission bands last much longer. Keeps them on the job down to the last thin wafer. Lubricates your motor perfectly. Keeps it full-powered; long-lived. And makes that fine little car of yours give you the added comfort you deserve.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

CUSHION UP!

I REMEMBER when rubber heels were a novelty and although an enterprising advertiser argued his product far and wide, still the prejudice prevailed and folk went on with their solid treads.

But now how do we find things? Rubber heels are quite universal, and when I buy my pair of shoes I note that the rubber heels are there in advance.

Why rubber heels? Well, because they make life's walk easier. The scientist tells us about the terrible jolt that each hit of the heel gives to the body as it hits the pavement. And he tells of the many effects—that are not good—which result from these hundreds of needless jolts—they ever so humble.

I am no scientist but I like rubber heels! I find my nerves in a much happier frame of behavior and besides I like the quiet sound of the rubber heel. There is too much noise in this world anyway.

I wish that rubber heels, or some sort of cushion might be invented for people's tongues, or voices, or their looks, or their tempers.

We all need cushioning throughout.

You often hear the phrase: "He or she gets on my nerves." But if those nerves had what rubber heels give to the shoe, then that person would have a hard time getting on anybody's nerves.

The calm and collected person is the exception in this world.

I know a man who is hard to ruffle. I think of him as well cushioned. The harsh noises of this world hit him silently. He has absolute control of himself.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

TO THE AMBITIOUS BOY

Some go far by moving slowly,
Greatness has beginnings lowly
And the danger of the age is
Youth shall sell its dreams for wages.
Wheels are spinning, lathes are turning,
Large the pay for little learning,
Lost the boy by salary blinded,
Lad, I pray, be future-minded.

All great men need time for growing,
First the tilling, then the sowing,
Then the green shoots, last the harvest.
Rapid growth the sooner starvest;
Nothing grows on deserts sunny,
Boy, not be misled by money,
From your future never borrow,
Big today is small tomorrow.

Be the seed of something greater,
Be a worker, and a waiter;
Seek the place that holds promotion,
Calls for courage and devotion;
Look beyond the present minute,
Take the post with striving in it,
Though but little it rewards you,
See the future it affords you.

Starting big means little ending,
From the top it's all descending,
But there is no backward turning
For the boy intent on learning;
Eager lad, I say, beware you
Lest the easy task ensnare you,
Brave life's humble growing stages,
Do not sell your dreams for wages.

Snappy Paragraphs

The neighbors have been borrowing things from Columbus Allison's tool chest so much he has decided to name it the community chest.

Clab Hancock spent a few days this week in reading over an insurance policy somebody sent him as a sample, and he has written to say that all he wanted to know was that if he died would his folks get the money.

Cricket Hicks reports that he talked to a stage actor that is with the tent show at Bounding Billows, and in the conversation the actor admitted that he was the only real actor in the company.

Weather Guides Pennant?
Whether or not Old Man Weather is a reliable baseball prophet is bothering the fans of Williamsport. Playing a hunch as the result of his actions since 1923 they are inclined to think the team has a good chance to win the pennant this year in the New York-Pennsylvania League.

In 1923 the team played its opener in a snow storm, winning the game and also the pennant. In 1924 the feat was repeated, but last year the opening game was played on a warm day and York took the pennant. This year Williamsport defeated Shamokin in the opener and the fans had to wear overcoats although snow was lacking.

Greater is he who conquers himself than he who conquers a thousand.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

Isn't it wonderful, Little Reader, how the animals can take such good care of each other? To think that a number of ants can make a ladder of themselves on which to climb down from a tree branch to the ground is amazing. Indeed it seemed so to the little rabbit, who you will recall in the last story was listening intently to Miss Ant as she described all the wonderful feats that ants accomplish.

"Tell me more, your habits are so interesting," begged the bunny boy, taking off his khaki cap to scratch his left ear with his right hind foot.

"Tell me more, tell me more, In my little head I'd store More of knowledge every day To be wise when I am gray."

"Ha, ha," laughed Miss Ant, a happy feeling tingling her kind little heart at seeing so interested a person as our bunny boy.

"Cook up your ears to hear what I say, Life is too short to waste a day. Even a minute wasted may Make you sorry when you are gray."

"That means when I am old, I pre-sume," interposed the little rabbit, wistfully.

"Yes, that's what I mean," answered Miss Ant. "When we are young we set little value on time, but as we grow older we realize it is very precious. Days that are gone will never come again."

"Dear, dear, I will try to make the best of my time," cried the bunny boy.

"And now, before you go, let me tell just a few more things about us ants. If on our journey we must cross a long, sunny stretch of land, we larger sisters, who are not hurt by the sun, form an arched tunnel with our bodies, under which our weaker sisters may crawl."

"How, how do you do this?" asked the little rabbit, more amazed than ever.

"We clasp one another's hands and feet," answered Miss Ant. "But where the distance is too great, we build a tunnel, a sort of raised roof like a half piece of pipe cut lengthwise along the ground. This is built by sticking together grains of sand. It makes a covered way for our smaller sisters."

"How interested Professor Jim Crow would be in what you say," cried the bunny boy. "He has a Wisdom Book in which he writes many things."

"Well, you ask him if he knows anything about our cows," said Miss Ant, trying hard not to smile at the look of astonishment that spread over the little rabbit's face.

"We keep our cows on the trees," she went on, seeing that the little rabbit was too amazed to speak. "We call them Aphides, and in order to reach them and escape the birds that are always on the lookout to eat us, we build a covered way along the ground and up the tree trunk when we go to milk them. Then, too, we often build a clay roof over our cows,

"I must tell this to Mrs. Cow"

—a sort of cow-shed. Oh, yes, we take good care of them and are careful that no enemy shall find them."

"Whew-eu!" whistled the little rabbit between his lips. "Goodness me! I must tell this to Mrs. Cow."

"The Ant Cows are not like her," laughed Miss Ant. "No, indeed. They are tiny insects that give a kind of a milk suited to us ants," and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Well-known druggists say every-body uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simplyampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beau-tiful. Adv.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

TO THE AMBITIOUS BOY

Some go far by moving slowly,
Greatness has beginnings lowly
And the danger of the age is
Youth shall sell its dreams for wages.
Wheels are spinning, lathes are turning,

Large the pay for little learning,
Lost the boy by salary blinded,
Lad, I pray, be future-minded.

All great men need time for growing,
First the tilling, then the sowing,
Then the green shoots, last the harvest.

Rapid growth the sooner starvest;
Nothing grows on deserts sunny,
Boy, be not misled by money,
From your future never borrow,
Big today is small tomorrow.

Be the seed of something greater,
Be a worker, and a waiter;
Seek the place that holds promotion,
Calls for courage and devotion;
Look beyond the present minute,
Take the post with striving in it,
Though but little it rewards you,
See the future it affords you.

Starting big means little ending,
From the top it's all descending,
But there is no backward turning
For the boy intent on learning;
Eager lad, I say, beware you
Lest the easy task ensnare you,
Brave life's humble growing stages,
Do not sell your dreams for wages.

Snappy Paragraphs

By George Bingham

The neighbors have been borrowing things from Columbus Allsop's tool chest so much he has decided to name it the community chest.

Clab Hancock spent a few days this week in reading over an insurance policy somebody sent him as a sample, and he has written to say that all he wanted to know was that if he died would his folks get the money.

Cricket Hicks reports that he talked to a stage actor that is with the tent show at Bounding Billows, and in the conversation the actor admitted that he was the only real actor in the company.

Weather Guides Pennant?
Whether or not Old Man Weather is a reliable baseball prophet is bothering the fans of Williamsport. Playing a hunch as the result of his actions since 1923 they are inclined to think the team has a good chance to win the pennant this year in the New York-Pennsylvania League.

In 1923 the team played its opener in a snow storm, winning the game and also the pennant. In 1924 the feat was repeated, but last year the opening game was played on a warm day and York took the pennant. This year Williamsport defeated Shamokin in the opener and the fans had to wear overcoats although snow was lacking.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

Isn't it wonderful, Little Reader, how the animals can take such good care of each other? To think that a number of ants can make a ladder of themselves on which to climb down from a tree branch to the ground is amazing. Indeed it seemed so to the little rabbit, who you will recall in the last story was listening intently to Miss Ant as she described all the wonderful feats that ants accomplish. "Tell me more," Your habits are so interesting," begged the bunny boy, taking off his khaki cap to scratch his left ear with his right hind foot.

"Tell me more, tell me more; In my little head I'd store More of knowledge every day To be wise when I am gray."

"Ha, ha," laughed Miss Ant, a happy feeling tingling her kind little heart at seeing so interested a person as our bunny boy.

"Cock up your ears to hear what I say, Life is too short to waste a day. Even a minute wasted may Make you sorry when you are gray."

"That means when I am old, I presume," interposed the little rabbit, wistfully.

"Yes, that's what I mean," answered Miss Ant. "When we are young we set little value on time, but as we grow older we realize it is very precious. Days that are gone will never come again."

"Dear, dear, I will try to make the best of my time," cried the bunny boy.

"And now, before you go, let me tell just a few more things about us ants. If on our journey we must cross a long, sunny stretch of land, we larger sisters, who are not hurt by the sun, form an arched tunnel with our bodies, under which our weaker sisters may crawl."

"How, how do you do this?" asked the little rabbit, more amazed than ever.

"We clasp one another's hands and feet," answered Miss Ant. "But where the distance is too great, we build a tunnel, a sort of raised roof like a half piece of pipe cut lengthwise along the ground. This is built by sticking together grains of sand. It makes a covered way for our smaller sisters."

"How interested Professor Jim Crow would be in what you say," cried the bunny boy. "He has a Wisdom Book in which he writes many things."

"Well, you ask him if he knows anything about our cows," said Miss Ant, trying hard not to smile at the look of astonishment that spread over the little rabbit's face.

"We keep our cows on the trees," she went on, seeing that the little rabbit was too amazed to speak. "We call them Aphides, and in order to reach them and escape the birds that are always on the lookout to eat us, we build a covered way along the ground and up the tree trunk when we go to milk them. Then, too, we often build a clay roof over our cows.

—a sort of cow-shed. Oh, yes, we take good care of them and are careful that no enemy shall find them." "Whew-eul!" whistled the little rabbit between his lips. "Goodness me! I must tell this to Mrs. Cow." "The Ant Cows are not like her," laughed Miss Ant. "No, indeed. They are tiny insects that give a kind of a milk suited to us ants," and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

CUSHION UP!

I REMEMBER when rubber heels were a novelty and although an enterprising advertiser argued his product far and wide, still the prejudice prevailed and folk went on with their solid treads.

But now how do we find things? Rubber heels are quite universal, and when I buy my pair of shoes I note that the rubber heels are there in advance.

Why rubber heels? Well, because they make life's walk easier. The scientist tells us about the terrible jolt that each hit of the heel gives to the body as it hits the pavement. And he tells of the many effects—that are not good—which result from these hundreds of needless jolts—they ever so humble.

I am no scientist but I like rubber heels! I find my nerves in a much happier frame of behavior and besides I like the quiet sound of the rubber heel. There is too much noise in this world anyway.

I wish that rubber heels, or some sort of cushion might be invented for people's tongues, or voices, or their looks, or their tempers.

We all need cushioning throughout.

You often hear the phrase: "He or she gets on my nerves." But if those nerves had what rubber heels give to the shoe, then that person would have a hard time getting on anybody's nerves.

The calm and collected person is the exception in this world.

I know a man who is hard to ruffle. I think of him as well cushioned. The harsh noises of this world hit him silently. He has absolute control of himself.

Mrs. Cleveland Hollis

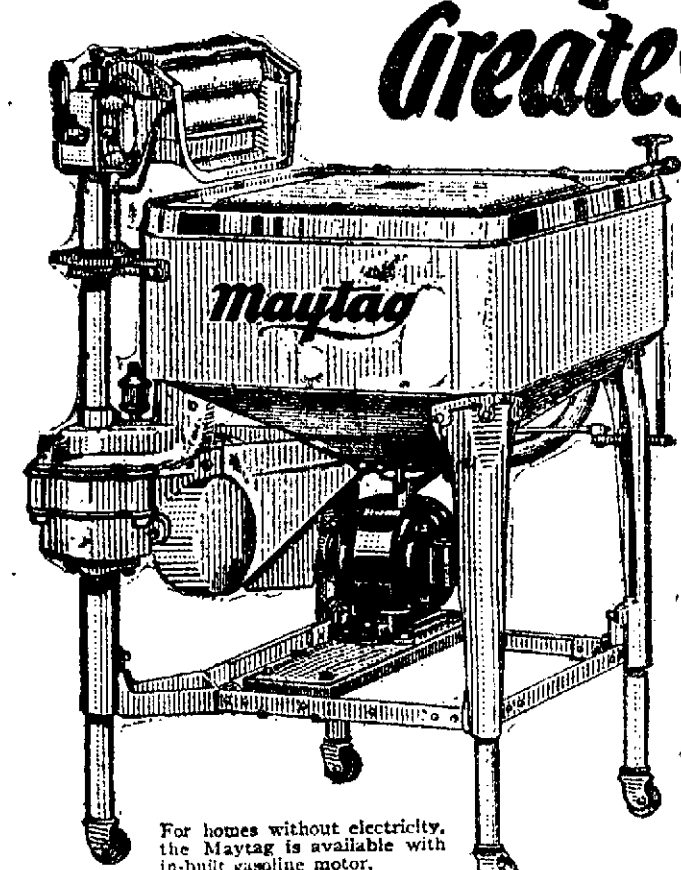

Bradford, Pa.—"I had a severe case of feminine weakness brought on through motherhood. I suffered from headaches and was sick at my stomach. I grew very weak and thin. My nerves were so upset I could not sleep. My back ached and I had severe bearing pains. I was completely run-down in health but Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription relieved me of my weakness, strengthened my nerves, relieved me of the sick stomach, also the pains in my head and back, and the bearing pains in my side. After that I grew well and strong. I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It seems to strengthen every organ in a woman's body."—Mrs. Cleveland Hollis, 5 Greens Court.
